Right. Time for another episode of #Transformers G1 Season 3, "Five Faces of Darkness Part 3" - apologies for it taking so long, but after the massive megathread I realised I really had to pace myself.

Enjoy the Space Concorde - at least someone sees its value.

#Transformers having a scaling problem?

NEVER

(Those jets are flying into another jet that should be the same size as they are)

All of a sudden there are Warp Gates everywhere. It's only been 20 years of a Timeskip - was this always there and the #Transformers just never had the energy to get to them?

Living on a Space Platform apparently gives humans a bad case of jaundice. #Transformers

We're introduced to a new character from Earth Defence Command, Marissa Faireborn.

We haven't seen Sparkplug yet. Is he dead? #Transformers

I may have said this before, but I don't like this. In the first 2 seasons, this would have been Megatron and a bunch of distinct-looking characters. Now it's Galvatron and a bunch of what are basically clone troopers all coloured similarly. It feels less fun. #Transformers

Right. So fresh out of his lava bath, Galvatron has

1 - One-shotted a planet.
2 - Taken out a Defence Platform with multiple shots
3 - Slightly wounded Wheelie with one shot.

All in the same episode. Is he getting weaker?
More like we still need to sell these #Transformers .

I'm on the fence about Galvatron's insanity here. In the series so far Megatron was full of bluster and arrogance, and now it seems we've swapped that for full-on unpredictability. I like the more measured takes from the #Transformers Netflix series.

(Those are the ones I saw first, so G1 is a bit of a shock.) I loved the goofiness of the first two series but post-movie is feeling odd. I don't dislike it, but I feel like there's less... chemistry? It's hard to explain. Then again this is an opening arc. #Transformers

The Autobots are stuck on a planet of Bubble Gum?

Why is there a planet of stickiness?

Is this like a cosmic glue trap?

So the Quintessons are bribing the Deceptions on Char with Energon to do their dirty work and kill the Autobots.

One says "Very soon they will be ours again."

Wait... what?

WAIT JUST A MO'.

The cleaning machine on planet bubble gum sucks up both gum and debris, sorting and clearing out the rubbish. So Rodimus forces it to crash... by feeding MORE gum into it? It's already handling tonnes of it, why does a handful more crash it!?

The Quintesson with them gawks, saying they were "never programmed for self-sacrifice", prompting Rodimus to ask how it knows that.

Yes. How?

I'm sensing a trend here.

Blitzwing seems to remember something about the Quintessons and doesn't want to go along with their plan.

What does he know?

And as the Decepticons attack the Autobots on planet bubblegum, the Quintessons chuckle that they are one step closer to their own doom... Which is where we end part 3. Part 4 of #Transformers : Five Faces of Darkness soon!
